Brief Description:

The National Institutes of Health Oxford-Cambridge Scholars Program is an accelerated, individualized doctoral training program for outstanding science students committed to biomedical research careers. The program is based on the British system, in which students perform doctoral research without required formal courses other than those students choose to take in relationship to their own interests. Students selected for admission to the program have already developed a passion for science through engagement in summer, job related, or undergraduate research programs.

Scholars will receive tuition and stipend support, based on NIH policy, for the duration of the program, approximately four years. Scholars are allowed to partner with other scholarship programs. Additionally, scholars will form a dual collaborative mentorship, consisting of one mentor at the NIH intramural campus, Bethesda, MD, and one mentor at either the University of Oxford or the University of Cambridge in the United Kingdom.
